SCALPEL, GEIGER COUNTER BATTLING DISEASE JOINTLY

Being Used Together in A New Field of Medical Science

TAKE PRECAUTIONS

Ordinary Objects Handled With Care; Many Towed Out to Sea

This is the third of four articles describing the use of atomic energy and other tools of physicists in post-war medical research.

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 4 — (INS) — "Warning — Radiation — Keep Away."

This forbidding sign, printed in large red letters, is posted on the door of a research laboratory at the Yale University medical school. Behind that door is the strange world of medical physics where the surgeon's scalpel and the geiger counter are used together in a new field of medical science.

The members of Yale's medical physics group have been recruited from many branches of science. Physicians, engineers, chemists and physiologists work together on the same experiments, each bringing his or her specialized training to a combined attack on the mysteries of disease.

The most ordinary objects are handled with elaborate caution in this atomic age laboratory. Waste and scrap material—bits of metal, old tools and dead animals—are not tossed in the trash can as they would be in most laboratories. Instead they are placed carefully in concrete-lined containers: often they are taken miles out to sea and sunk.

If a bottle is tipped over, the researchers not only wipe up the spilled liquid, they strip the paint from the table underneath the stain. Test tubes and other equipment are picked up with long-handled tongs and special tools are

HEAR A. S. BRIGGS, JR.

MORRISVILLE, June 4 — Albert S. Briggs, Jr., manager of the new Phila. Electric Co. distribution center, Penndel, addressed members of the Kiwanis Club of Bucks Co. Lincoln Highway, last evening, at Holiday Inn, near here. His subject was "What's Ahead For Lower Bucks County?", placing particular emphasis to expansion of the electric company's facilities.

SPEAK UP; GENERAL!

Some weeks ago, when President Truman took over the steel industry in defiance of statutes and constitution, this newspaper called upon General Eisenhower to comment upon the issue, perhaps the most challenging ever raised in this supposedly self-governing republic.

General Eisenhower found time to comment on a number of other matters, such as the amount of money which should be raised to buy European support to NATO, the advisability of universal military training, and other collateral subjects where his thinking parallels that of the Marshall-Truman-Acheson axis.

But he found no time to discuss the question of whether it was right for a president to declare his own emergencies and do whatever he chose to meet them, without regard to the remedies provided by Congress or the restrictions set up by the Constitution.

The subject was a political hot-potato, for the reason that it was touch-and-go, in many minds, whether the Supreme Court would "stand up" in the matter, or would bend the knee to the power which appointed the court—the chief executive.

Of the two major candidates for the Republican nomination, one courageously stated his position, without waiting to see what the justices were going to say. That was Senator Taft, who promptly branded the steel take-over a high-handed action without legal or constitutional authorization, and the sort of conduct which would eventually destroy free government in this nation.

The other leading contender, General Eisenhower, remained silent.

We wish respectively to point out to General Eisenhower that this is one of a hundred issues where it is, or should be, imperative for the Republicans to know where their would-be candidates stand before the convention.

It is not too late for the General to say whether he holds it reprehensible for a President to try to usurp the constitutional power of Congress, whether he considers it to be "statesmanship"

WHERE ARE THE CROPS?

Government and private forces are mobilizing against the "black market" in potatoes. Yep, there is a shortage.

In New York a restaurant association has advised its 1,500 members to drop potatoes from the menu.

Gone are the potatoes of yesteryear. In 1950 potatoes were rotting on the ground or being destroyed by the government, because of a surplus brought about by government price supports.

Removal of supports resulted in a smaller crop, as potato farmers tried to avoid a surplus. But there have never been government controls on the weather. As it turned out, 1951 was the worst potato-growing year within memory. What should have been a crop big enough to meet consumer demand fell far short in quantity and quality.

Normally enough new potatoes would have entered the market to keep the shortage from becoming as serious as it is today. But again the weather intervened, putting new potato crops in the South several weeks behind schedule. And if prices seem likely to stay up, these growers will be in no hurry to dig their crops.

By leaving the tubers in the ground, they can gamble on still getting good prices for as much as 100 additional bushels an acre.

A-BOMB IN REVERSE

For the details of the theory that the universe is not running down, but continuously rebuilding itself, the reader is referred to the Astronomer Royal of Great Britain, Sir Harold Spencer Jones, and the full text of the recent proceedings of the Royal Institution in London.

Until Dr. Albert Einstein demonstrated that matter and energy were interchangeable there was nothing to support the theory of continuous creation. But now the giant "cosmotron" of the Brookhaven Laboratory on Long Island is to be the tool in an attempt to "reverse the process of the atomic bomb and make subatomic matter out of energy."

The most abundant and simplest stuff is hydrogen. Could it be that in the great scheme of things, all matter—whether a distant star or a new spring hat—was hydrogen originally?

The older scientific theory of a universe running down is now placed squarely beside the new theory of a universe constantly refreshing itself.

Science has succeeded in devising an automatic shut-off on almost everything except the human tongue.

A candidate would hesitate to promise to lead the country back to normalcy because of the distance involved.

Scientists continue to study weather on Mars, having concluded there isn't much they can do about it nearer home.

Speak Up, General!

for such a president to misrepresent grossly the facts of the matter in a nation-wide broadcast, and whether he believes that a president, under such circumstances, ought to be impeached and removed.

But in this instance, the opinion of the Supreme Court has spelled out the courageous and patriotic and constructive answers, and General Eisenhower can, in this one example, now speak with much freedom and assurance.

Innumerable other issues, however, still remain undiscussed.

Whether they will be taken up in detail in the Abilene speech today, or will be allowed to simmer in the hopes that these, like the steel dispute, will answer themselves without embarrassment to political candidates—that is something we will know better after the General completes his talk.

These precautions are necessary because of the invisible but deadly radiation of many substances used in the medical physics laboratories. The radioactive substances—iodine, phosphorus, carbon, sulphur and other materials—are known as isotopes.

Development of the radioactive isotopes has placed a new and accurate method of measurement in the hands of the scientists who are fighting disease. The substances, "labelled" with radioactivity, can be injected into laboratory animals and traced as they circulate through the bloodstream and find their way to the various organs.

Scientists can study such questions as: where do certain drugs go in the body? What effect does disease have on certain organs? This new method of measurement is being used not only to study the body's organs, but to explore the intricate life-processes of the cells themselves.

Valuable as these isotopes are, they must be handled with great care. Some substances remain radioactice literally for ages. If waste materials from the laboratory were buried with ordinary trash, they might kill a ditch digger 200 years from now or an archeologist excavating the remains of our cities in the year 8952.

One end of the long radiation laboratory room at Yale is filled with a large, glass-fronted structure which looks somewhat like a department store window. The radioactive isotopes are kept in this structure behind a wall of lead bricks and the scientists handle them with special tools, watching their work in a mirror.

The value of these isotopes as a means of measurement is illustrated in the medical physics team's study of the reticulo-endothelial cell system. These cells are concentrated in the liver and spleen and are scattered in smaller amounts through the bone marrow and the rest of the body.

The reticulo-endothelial cells are vital to the life and health of the body. They take vitamins and fats from the bloodstream and convert them for use by the entire system; and they trap poisons and bacteria and make them harmless.

For many years medical researchers could observe the actions of these cells only by injecting dyes and attempting to trace their route through the bloodstream. Now the medical physics researchers "label" substances with radioactivity and measure their exact rate of progress from the blood to the cells.

The radioactive substance is injected into a rat. Then a drop of blood is drawn from the rat's tail and placed in a Geiger counter, which clicks off the blood's high radiation count.

A short time later another drop of blood is taken from the rat and placed in the Geiger counter. This time the radiation count is lower. The radioactive substance, acting in the same manner as bacteria, is disappearing from the rat's bloodstream into the reticulo-endothelial cells.

By taking additional blood samples at regular intervals and checking their radiation count the scientists can measure the exact rate at which the cells take up substances from the bloodstream. Then they can begin tests to find out what changes are caused in this rate by disease.

What happens, for example, if the rat is subjected to a heavy dose of radiation—the type of exposure that might be caused by an atom bomb blast? Experiments by the Yale medical physics group shows that the disappearancec rate becomes slower.

In other words, the damaged cells are not taking poisons and bacteria from the blood and making them harmless in the normal manner. These substances still are circulating through the body.

Certain drugs may block the action of these cells, certain diseases may effect them. All these possibilities are being studied by the medical physicists with the new methods of measurement of the atomic age.

Picture of a Pair who just waked up

HERE in the driveway is a Buick. It has just arrived. It belongs to this proud young couple. They've just "arrived" too.

They've arrived at a discovery—the discovery that owning a Buick instead of a "low-priced car" isn't so much a matter of money.

It's a matter of knowing the facts of life. Buick prices are closer to the prices of smaller, less powerful, less distinguished cars than most people think.

Why don't you check into this?

You'll find you could pay $300 to $400 more – and still not match the horsepower of this nimble beauty.

You could pay hundreds of dollars more—and still not get any more interior room, or richer fabrics.

But that's only part of the story.

The big thing about any car is the way it goes.

So you ought to find out how this car rides the road—the freedom from bobble and sway that cost a million real dollars to develop.

You ought to sample the way Dynaflow Drive* feeds the power – with a steady swoop and unbroken smoothness in city traffic, on hills, or out on the open road.

And you ought to know how it feels to touch off that Fireball 8 Engine. With all its might, this high-compression valve-in-head gets a lot of miles from a gallon of gas.

We'll tell you this—because a lot of folks have told us this: No matter what car you're driving now—no matter what cars you've looked at—they'll never seem the same after you try this one.

Just give us a chance to prove it – and you'll have a lot of fun.

*Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice. Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.

Sure is true for '52

KAISER METAL DROPS ITS 3RD GAME IN A ROW

Kaiser Metal dropped its third straight game of the Bristol Softball League as it was blanked by Franklin A. C., 1-0, last evening, in a hard-fought tilt on Memorial Park field.

Tony Capella pitched the shutout ball for the winners and kept his seven hits well apart. Kaiser did not get a runner beyond second base. Kaiser had runners on base in five of the seven frames but Capella was invincible in the clutches.

It was a heart-breaking tilt for "Chick" Stansky to lose. Stansky allowed Franklin two hits. But these were combined with a disastrous error to produce the only run of the game in the second inning.

SCALPEL, GEIGER COUNTER BATTLING DISEASE JOINTLY

Being Used Together in A New Field of Medical Science

TAKE PRECAUTIONS

Ordinary Objects Handled With Care; Many Towed Out to Sea

This is the third of four articles describing the use of atomic energy and other tools of physicists in post-war medical research.

By Allen R. Dodd, Jr.
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 4 — (INS) — "Warning — Radiation — Keep Away."

This forbidding sign, printed in large red letters, is posted on the door of a research laboratory at the Yale University medical school. Behind that door is the strange world of medical physics where the surgeon's scalpel and the geiger counter are used together in a new field of medical science.

The members of Yale's medical physics group have been recruited from many branches of science. Physicians, engineers, chemists and physiologists work together on the same experiments, each bringing his or her specialized training to a combined attack on the mysteries of disease.

The most ordinary objects are handled with elaborate caution in this atomic age laboratory. Waste and scrap material—bits of metal, old tools and dead animals—are not tossed in the trash can as they would be in most laboratories. Instead they are placed carefully in concrete-lined containers: often they are taken miles out to sea and sunk.

If a bottle is tipped over, the researchers not only wipe up the spilled liquid, they strip the paint from the table underneath the stain. Test tubes and other equipment are picked up with long-handled tongs and special tools are

MORRISVILLE, June 4 — Albert S. Briggs, Jr., manager of the new Phila. Electric Co. distribution center, Penndel, addressed members of the Kiwanis Club of Bucks Co. Lincoln Highway, last evening, at Holiday Inn, near here. His subject was "What's Ahead For Lower Bucks County?", placing particular emphasis to expansion of the electric company's facilities.

SPEAK UP; GENERAL!

Some weeks ago, when President Truman took over the steel industry in defiance of statutes and constitution, this newspaper called upon General Eisenhower to comment upon the issue, perhaps the most challenging ever raised in this supposedly self-governing republic.

General Eisenhower found time to comment on a number of other matters, such as the amount of money which should be raised to buy European support to NATO, the advisability of universal military training, and other collateral subjects where his thinking parallels that of the Marshall-Truman-Acheson axis.

But he found no time to discuss the question of whether it was right for a president to declare his own emergencies and do whatever he chose to meet them, without regard to the remedies provided by Congress or the restrictions set up by the Constitution.

The subject was a political hot-potato, for the reason that it was touch-and-go, in many minds, whether the Supreme Court would "stand up" in the matter, or would bend the knee to the power which appointed the court—the chief executive.

Of the two major candidates for the Republican nomination, one courageously stated his position, without waiting to see what the justices were going to say. That was Senator Taft, who promptly branded the steel take-over a high-handed action without legal or constitutional authorization, and the sort of conduct which would eventually destroy free government in this nation.

The other leading contender, General Eisenhower, remained silent.

We wish respectively to point out to General Eisenhower that this is one of a hundred issues where it is, or should be, imperative for the Republicans to know where their would-be candidates stand before the convention.

It is not too late for the General to say whether he holds it reprehensible for a President to try to usurp the constitutional power of Congress, whether he considers it to be "statesmanship"

CIO Chiefs and Steel Co. Heads Called to White House

Washington—The White House today recalled chiefs of the CIO United Steelworkers and heads of the six major steel companies to Washington tomorrow for new talks aimed at ending the nationwide strike. There was strong official hope that renewed collective bargaining would restore production.

American Troops Smash Compounds

Koje Island—American troops led by flame throwing tanks smashed today into three Koje Island compounds where they destroyed red flags, burned down several tents, seized five rebel bosses and rescued 17 anti-communist prisoners. Seventy-five inmates, including the five red leaders, were removed from one of the enclosures where the tanks reduced some prisoner tents to ashes without hurting anyone. The GI's also toppled flagpoles and burned anti-American propaganda banners. Brig. Gen. Boatner personally commanded the operation.

Economic Paralysis Rapidly Spreading

Pittsburgh—The showdown steel strike brought production cutbacks and enforced layoffs in dependent industries today as steel officials met in New York to plan their next step in the two-day-old walkout. Meanwhile, a fast-spreading economic paralysis threatened the country with some 35,000 coal miners in steel-company owned plants and some 9000 railroad workers laid off. The New York Central and Erie railroads furloughed 1200 workers and the Pennsylvania railroad announced it will furlough 8000 tomorrow.

WHERE ARE THE CROPS?

Government and private forces are mobilizing against the "black market" in potatoes. Yep, there is a shortage.

In New York a restaurant association has advised its 1,500 members to drop potatoes from the menu.

Gone are the potatoes of yesteryear. In 1950 potatoes were rotting on the ground or being destroyed by the government, because of a surplus brought about by government price supports.

Removal of supports resulted in a smaller crop, as potato farmers tried to avoid a surplus. But there have never been government controls on the weather. As it turned out, 1951 was the worst potato-growing year within memory. What should have been a crop big enough to meet consumer demand fell far short in quantity and quality.

Normally enough new potatoes would have entered the market to keep the shortage from becoming as serious as it is today. But again the weather intervened, putting new potato crops in the South several weeks behind schedule. And if prices seem likely to stay up, these growers will be in no hurry to dig their crops.

By leaving the tubers in the ground, they can gamble on still getting good prices for as much as 100 additional bushels an acre.

A-BOMB IN REVERSE

For the details of the theory that the universe is not running down, but continuously rebuilding itself, the reader is referred to the Astronomer Royal of Great Britain, Sir Harold Spencer Jones, and the full text of the recent proceedings of the Royal Institution in London.

Until Dr. Albert Einstein demonstrated that matter and energy were interchangeable there was nothing to support the theory of continuous creation. But now the giant "cosmotron" of the Brookhaven Laboratory on Long Island is to be the tool in an attempt to "reverse the process of the atomic bomb and make subatomic matter out of energy."

The most abundant and simplest stuff is hydrogen. Could it be that in the great scheme of things, all matter—whether a distant star or a new spring hat—was hydrogen originally?

The older scientific theory of a universe running down is now placed squarely beside the new theory of a universe constantly refreshing itself.

Science has succeeded in devising an automatic shut-off on almost everything except the human tongue.

A candidate would hesitate to promise to lead the country back to normalcy because of the distance involved.

Scientists continue to study weather on Mars, having concluded there isn't much they can do about it nearer home.

Speak Up, General!

for such a president to misrepresent grossly the facts of the matter in a nation-wide broadcast, and whether he believes that a president, under such circumstances, ought to be impeached and removed.

But in this instance, the opinion of the Supreme Court has spelled out the courageous and patriotic and constructive answers, and General Eisenhower can, in this one example, now speak with much freedom and assurance.

Innumerable other issues, however, still remain undiscussed. Whether they will be taken up in detail in the Abilene speech today, or will be allowed to simmer in the hopes that these, like the steel dispute, will answer themselves without embarrassment to political candidates—that is something we will know better after the General completes his talk.

These precautions are necessary because of the invisible but deadly radiation of many substances used in the medical physics laboratories. The radioactive substances—iodine, phosphorus, carbon, sulphur and other materials—are known as isotopes.

Development of the radioactive isotopes has placed a new and accurate method of measurement in the hands of the scientists who are fighting disease. The substances, "labelled" with radioactivity, can be injected into laboratory animals and traced as they circulate through the bloodstream and find their way to the various organs.

Scientists can study such questions as: where do certain drugs go in the body? What effect does disease have on certain organs? This new method of measurement is being used not only to study the body's organs, but to explore the intricate life-processes of the cells themselves.

Valuable as these isotopes are, they must be handled with great care. Some substances remain radioactice literally for ages. If waste materials from the laboratory were buried with ordinary trash, they might kill a ditch digger 200 years from now or an archeologist excavating the remains of our cities in the year 8952.

One end of the long radiation laboratory room at Yale is filled with a large, glass-fronted structure which looks somewhat like a department store window. The radioactive isotopes are kept in this structure behind a wall of lead bricks and the scientists handle them with special tools, watching their work in a mirror.

The value of these isotopes as a means of measurement is illustrated in the medical physics team's study of the reticulo-endothelial cell system. These cells are concentrated in the liver and spleen and are scattered in smaller amounts through the bone marrow and the rest of the body.

The reticulo-endothelial cells are vital to the life and health of the body. They take vitamins and fats from the bloodstream and convert them for use by the entire system; and they trap poisons and bacteria and make them harmless.

For many years medical researchers could observe the actions of these cells only by injecting dyes and attempting to trace their route through the bloodstream. Now the medical physics researchers "label" substances with radioactivity and measure their exact rate of progress from the blood to the cells.

The radioactive substance is injected into a rat. Then a drop of blood is drawn from the rat's tail and placed in a Geiger counter, which clicks off the blood's high radiation count.

A short time later another drop of blood is taken from the rat and placed in the Geiger counter. This time the radiation count is lower. The radioactive substance, acting in the same manner as bacteria, is disappearing from the rat's bloodstream into the reticulo-endothelial cells.

By taking additional blood samples at regular intervals and checking their radiation count the scientists can measure the exact rate at which the cells take up substances from the bloodstream. Then they can begin tests to find out what changes are caused in this rate by disease.

What happens, for example, if the rat is subjected to a heavy dose of radiation—the type of exposure that might be caused by an atom bomb blast? Experiments by the Yale medical physics group shows that the disappearancec rate becomes slower.

In other words, the damaged cells are not taking poisons and bacteria from the blood and making them harmless in the normal manner. These substances still are circulating through the body.

Certain drugs may block the action of these cells, certain diseases may effect them. All these possibilities are being studied by the medical physicists with the new methods of measurement of the atomic age.

Picture of a Pair who just waked up

HERE in the driveway is a Buick. It has just arrived. It belongs to this proud young couple. They've just "arrived" too.

They've arrived at a discovery—the discovery that owning a Buick instead of a "low-priced car" isn't so much a matter of money.

It's a matter of knowing the facts of life. Buick prices are closer to the prices of smaller, less powerful, less distinguished cars than most people think.

Why don't you check into this?

You'll find you could pay $300 to $400 more—and still not match the horsepower of this nimble beauty.

You could pay hundreds of dollars more—and still not get any more interior room, or richer fabrics.

But that's only part of the story.

The big thing about any car is the way it goes.

So you ought to find out how this car rides the road—the freedom from bobble and sway that cost a million real dollars to develop.

You ought to sample the way Dynaflow Drive* feeds the power—with a steady swoop and unbroken smoothness in city traffic, on hills, or out on the open road.

And you ought to know how it feels to touch off that Fireball 8 Engine. With all its might, this high-compression valve-in-head gets a lot of miles from a gallon of gas.

We'll tell you this—because a lot of folks have told us this: No matter what car you're driving now—no matter what cars you've looked at—they'll never seem the same after you try this one.

Just give us a chance to prove it—and you'll have a lot of fun.

Lafayette street will now be completed and opened into S. Lincoln avenue.

Burgess Harry Shields reported five motor violations and two complaints on speeding on Lincoln avenue, which have been turned over to the police committee for investigation.

A letter from Newtown Businessmen's Association was read requesting the Planning Commission to make a survey of parking conditions in the business area and particularly of the parking lot at the rear of State street.

Zoning officer and building inspector Walter Scott reported the following permits issued: William W. Fabian, erection of a garage and bungalow on N. Chancellor street, $20,000; Francis M. Smith, house on Frost Lane, $8,500; Robert LaRue, apartment on Maple avenue, $1,000; C. Donald Downs, erection of a garage on Norwood street, $1,000; Harold P. Lewis, S. KAISER METAL DROPS ITS 3RD GAME IN A ROW

Kaiser Metal dropped its third straight game of the Bristol Softball League as it was blanked by Franklin A. C., 1-0, last evening, in a hard-fought tilt on Memorial Park field.

Tony Capella pitched the shutout ball for the winners and kept his seven hits well apart. Kaiser did not get a runner beyond second base. Kaiser had runners on base in five of the seven frames but Capella was invincible in the clutches.

It was a heart-breaking tilt for "Chick" Stansky to lose. Stansky allowed Franklin two hits. But these were combined with a disastrous error to produce the only run of the game in the second inning.
